Program Description

The Diversity certificate is useful to students who are interested in understanding the causes and consequences of diversity and inequality. The program uses multiple perspectives and theories to teach students the impacts, both positive and negative, of race, ethnicity, class, and gender in society. To earn the Diversity Certificate, students must complete one required course on social inequality and choose additional sociology electives from the Diversity and Inequality program area. Students must then choose two elective courses from a department other than Sociology: possible subject areas include anthropology, economics, psychology, and social work. An enriched and informed outlook is not the only benefit of completing the diversity certificate; the varied skills you will gain will also open the doors to many careers and job opportunities.

Career and Academic Opportunities

To enrich your academic experience, consider completing an internship or joining the Sociology Student Advisory Committee (S-SAC). Upon graduation, you can find work in the social services, law enforcement, or education. Students who choose to attend graduate school are eligible to pursue careers as lawyers, therapists, professors, or grant writers.

International Studies BA/BS

The screenshot shows the website for the International Studies program at the University of Utah. The header includes the university logo and a navigation menu with links for Advising, Map, Majors, Standards, Transfer, Returning, Preprofessional, and About. Below the header is the 'ACADEMIC ADVISING CENTER' title and social media icons for Twitter, Instagram, and Facebook. The main content area features the title 'International Studies' and a link to the 'International Studies Program'. It provides the advisor office location (210 C CTI) and phone number (801-581-6101). A paragraph describes the program's focus on descriptive, analytical, and methodological tools. A video player shows a scenic view of the university campus. Below the video are links for 'Career Information and Resources' and 'View courses in this department'. A section for transferring students includes a link to 'Getting Ready Transfer Guides'. The footer contains contact information for the Academic Advising Center, other links like AAC Webmaster and Accessibility, and social media icons under 'Stay Connected'. The University of Utah logo and 'Imagine U' branding are also present.

Program Description

Learn about the cultures across the world and become a truly global citizen with International Studies at the University of Utah. The courses available through this program give students descriptive, analytical, and methodological tools to help understand the world and the United States in a global context. Students in the International Studies program take courses from three core areas: Peoples, Challenges, and Systems. They must also take electives from a single focus area: Development & Sustainability, Foreign Relations & Security, Global Health, Culture & Identity, Trade & Commerce, European Studies, or Language/Culture Electives. Regardless of the chosen emphasis area, all International Studies students must also complete a learning abroad program or an international internship. Through the study of languages, geography, ethics, and human nature, students will form a basis for understanding global issues and their national and international impact. After graduating from the program, you will be prepared for a number of careers both domestically and internationally.

The Student Experience

Academic enrichment possibilities include completing your own undergraduate research project or publishing or presenting in an international studies-themed conference or journal. If you want to network and meet other students, the program offers many involvement opportunities. You can attend Tea Times, monthly meetings that offer career advice and discussion; join the International & Area Studies Student Advisory Committee (IAS SAC), offering feedback on the program; or, complete the Language Exchange Program and practice a foreign language with a native speaker.

Career Opportunities

The skills gained from the U’s International Studies program can be used in a diverse number of fields. Work locally or abroad as a translator, ambassador, or interpreter. Or, pursue a career in international business, working as an account manager or marketing analyst to help grow your company’s international presence and investments. Students can also enter the field of education as ESL instructors or teachers. Jobs in tourism—as travel writers, event managers, and airline employees—are also possible. If you decide to continue your education at the graduate level, you can find employment in social work, administration, higher education, linguistics, law, and anthropology.

Portuguese and Brazilian Studies Minor

The screenshot shows the University of Utah's website for the Portuguese and Brazilian Studies Minor. The header includes the university logo and navigation tabs for Admissions, Academics, The Arts, Global U, Health Care, and Athletics. A search bar is located in the top right corner.

The main content area features the title "Portuguese and Brazilian Studies Minor" with a star icon and social media links. Below the title, contact information is provided: "World Languages and Cultures", "languages.utah.edu", "Languages and Communication Building 1400", "801-581-7561", and "languages@hum.utah.edu". It also states "Minimum Minor Hours: 15" and "All courses must be passed with a C or better".

Under the "Foundation Courses" section, there is a "Required Course:" section listing "PTGSE 3060 - Third-Year Grammar 3 Credit(s)". Below that is a "Choose Two of the Following:" section with a list of five elective courses: "PTGSE 3050 - Topics in Literature and Culture 3 Credit(s)", "PTGSE 3580 - Contemporary Issues 3 Credit(s)", "PTGSE 4560 - Brazilian Civilization and Culture 3 Credit(s)", "PTGSE 4620 - Introduction to Portuguese and Lusophone Literature 3 Credit(s)", and "PTGSE 4630 - Introduction to Brazilian Literature 3 Credit(s)".

The right sidebar contains a "Catalog Search" box with a dropdown menu set to "Entire Catalog" and a search input field. Below the search box are links for "Catalog Home", "Course Descriptions", and "REQUIREMENTS". The "REQUIREMENTS" section lists "Undergraduate" and "Graduate" options, with "General Education & Bachelor Degree" selected. Other links include "Registration", "Graduation", "Academic Calendar", "Costs", and "Faculty". The "COLLEGES/SCHOOLS" section lists various university departments such as "College of Architecture + Planning", "David Eccles School of Business", "School for Cultural & Social Transformation", "School of Dentistry", "College of Education", "College of Engineering", and "College of Fine Arts".

Program Description

With the minor in Portuguese, students will study not only the global language of Portuguese, but they will also explore the rich culture and history of Brazil. Portuguese is the 6th most-widely-spoken language in the world, with speakers in Brazil and several other Lusophone (Portuguese-speaking) countries. As we become an increasingly global world, cross-cultural understanding and second language literacy are valuable skills you can put on job and graduate school applications. To ensure that you acquire these social and language abilities, the program offers Portuguese language and grammar instruction courses, as well as courses in Brazilian culture, literature, and civilization. Students then choose classes specific to Brazil and Latin America, in subjects such as anthropology, art history, political science, and economics. The Department of World Languages & Cultures at the University of Utah offers small classes and close instruction to students wishing to learn more about this fascinating language and country.

Academic and Career Opportunities

For academic enrichment, consider completing a learning abroad program or an international internship. Outside of the classroom, students can socialize and network by joining the Student Advisory Committee or Brazilian Club. Upon graduation, the minor in Portuguese and Brazilian studies can be paired with skills from your major degree program, allowing you to enter a number of fields. Communication or political science majors, for example, can use their foreign language skills to become translators, interpreters, advocates, and diplomats in local and international arenas. Business students will be equipped to pursue business ventures abroad, while education majors might consider ESL instruction careers.
